

HARDING TO MODIFY NEW LIQUOR RULE

SHIPS MAY CARRY "GOODS" IN INTER-PORT TRAFFIC.

MAY STOP AT "WET" PORTS

Diplomatic Envoys Made "Immune"
From "Dry" Regulations—Can Have Plenty of Spirits—Plan to Search Baggage.

Washington D. C.—President Harding will direct a modification of the drastic rule barring liquor from American ships, a cabinet officer has declared.

Under certain circumstances American vessels will be permitted to engage in the transportation of liquors, it was said. This is to be inter-port traffic, where American ships stop at "wet" ports.

United States ships are frequently offered cargoes of liquor from Shanghai to Hong Kong, or between South American ports, it was said. Such traffic is regarded as a regular commercial proposition and not in violation of United States laws, officials hold.

The president will also call upon the Treasury, State and Justice departments to clarify numerous problems not anticipated when the ruling was promulgated.

The outstanding instance applies to the Philippine Islands. The attorney general's rule prohibits ships of all flags docking at an island port with liquor aboard. The Volstead act on which the ruling is based is not operative in the Philippines, however, and prohibition officials stated they did not believe the new rule could apply there.

The eighteenth amendment itself applies to the Philippines, it was said. Under the terms of the island government, however, no law enacted within the United States can be enforced until the Philippine Legislature has adopted enforcing measures. The Philippine government has refused to pass such legislation and still is listed in the wet column.

The new ruling also would make it impossible for foreign embassies to obtain liquors. Under the wide latitude of "diplomatic immunity" and extra territoriality, foreign envoys are permitted to have all the liquor they desire.

Attorney General Daugherty holds that ships cannot enter American harbors with liquor in their cargoes, so the envoys will not be able to get any unless the ruling is modified, officials state.

As the law specifically permits the possession of liquor under these circumstances, it was pointed out the regulations will be relaxed to permit transportation for this purpose.

Some arrangements are to be made also for the transportation of wines and liquors for medicinal, scientific and sacramental use, all permitted in the Volstead act, officials believe.

Treasury officials are still busy drawing up the necessary regulations to enforce the Daugherty decision. It will be several days before they can be completed, it was said.

These regulations will name the branch of the government to see that shipping comes within the terms of the law. It is understood that customs officers will supervise foreign ships, while dry agents will keep the American ships free of liquor.

Dry agents state that while they do not expect any violations by ships, they expect much trouble with individuals. It is said that unless passengers and baggage are searched it would be impossible to prevent the thirsty tourists taking their bar with them.
